n the last edition of InnerView I said I intended to enjoy my year as Treasurer, and despite my daily visits to Woolwich Crown Court I am managing quite well.

In February there was a jolly Bar Mess in Hall, attended by Members of Hall and of the Circuits with guests. I hope those who attended thought it was a worthwhile expression of togetherness at the Bar. It was foreseeable that some part of the Country would be adversely affected by the weather, but snowdrifts in Birmingham! We missed you.
However, I know that one letter which went out under my name has given unintended offence. The letter was addressed to or intended for Advocacy Trainers who are not available to share their skills as often as the loyal hard core of workers who can always be relied upon to turn out for every event. If you have skills and have not been around lately we would be glad to see you again. If you would like to learn the skills of advocacy training, please get in touch with Master Korner or Beth Phillips in the Education & Training Department. To the loyal hard core of advocacy trainers, please forgive and many thanks.

Master Korner and Fiona Fulton, Head of Education & Training, must share the many thanks and praise for the weekend of the 10-11 March seminar in the Inn on Serious Sexual Offences and Advocacy. It was a most successful event.

THE ATTLEE FOUNDATION LECTURE 2007

MONDAY 14 MAY 2007

HIS EXCELLENCY MR KAMALESHP SHARMA, INDIAN HIGH COMMISSIONER: “INDIA AND THE UNITED KINGDOM IN THE GLOBALISING WORLD”

The Inner Temple is hosting the annual Attlee Foundation lecture this year, to celebrate the 60th anniversary of Indian Independence, in which four of its famous alumni – Clement Attlee, Mahatma Gandhi, Jawaharlal Nehru, Mohammed Ali Jinnah – played a decisive part.

The lecture, to be delivered by the Indian High Commissioner, will take place in the Inner Temple Hall on Monday 14 May at 5.45pm, followed by light refreshments.

This year sees the 60th anniversary of Indian Independence, an event of particular significance to the Inner Temple since four of its alumni – Clement Attlee, Mahatma Gandhi, Jawaharlal Nehru, Mohammed Ali Jinnah (an ad eundem member) – played a decisive part. In order to celebrate the occasion the Inn is hosting the annual Attlee Foundation lecture in May (see page 3).

Mohandas Karamchand Gandhi

Admitted to the Inner Temple on 6 November 1888 and called the Bar on 10 June 1891. Disbarred in 1922 after conviction in a British Court of Law in India. Posthumously restored to full membership on 3 November 1988, during the Treasurership of Master Monier-Williams.

Jawaharlal Nehru

First Prime Minister of India

Admitted to the Inner Temple on 11 January 1909 and called to the Bar on 19 June 1912.

Clement Richard Attlee

1st Earl Attlee, Prime Minister 1945-1951

Instrumental in granting Independence to India in 1947. Admitted to the Inner Temple on 30 January 1904 and called to the Bar on 19 November 1906.
The Attlee Foundation was established in 1967 to commemorate Clement Attlee’s life and work through a range of projects that benefit the people he cared most about - those disadvantaged by poverty or lack of opportunity, in particular young people.

Past Attlee projects have included a ground-breaking drug-rehabilitation project, now an independent national charity, provision of eye-camps in India and residential care for young people at risk.

In addition to the Annual Attlee Lecture, current projects include Tickets Please - a scheme providing travel grants to help individuals maintain family contact with members in hospital, care or rehabilitation a long way from home - and our current major project, the Attlee Youth & Community Centre, which was formally opened in January by Baroness Boothroyd.

Attlee Youth & Community Centre is a £3m redevelopment of the old Attlee Adventure Playground in Spitalfields, East London. This was well used for over twenty years but the facilities were only suited to 5-10 year olds, and were in desperate need of refurbishment to comply with modern standards. Faced with a choice of closure or complete re-development, the Trustees decided they had to safeguard this last patch of open space in the area for local children and young people. In June 2006 a new multi-purpose Youth & Community Centre (AYCC) was opened to meet the needs of children and youth, plus the community as a whole.

Spitalfields is a deprived inner-city ward in Tower Hamlets: 40% of its population is under 20; it has the highest percentage of households in the borough with four or more children aged under 16; there is 33% unemployment; 73% of households have no car. This means that most children come from poor households, which can hardly afford the basic necessities, let alone leisure activities. 80% of the 600+ members of the Centre are from the local Bangladeshi community, more than 15% are disabled, have special educational needs or are registered at risk. It has the worst levels of overcrowding in the UK and many young people have nowhere to study.

In 1945, reflecting back on his early experience of running the Haileybury boy’s club in Limehouse, Attlee remarked that the improvement in children’s health over that forty year period was not enough. He said: “one must constantly be multiplying the opportunities for social intercourse, for the development of the right kind of leadership and community consciousness.”

Unfortunately too many children and young people are still excluded from such opportunities and the Foundation will have these words in mind as we begin to shape our next project.
The book’s contents range from lively essays on history, architecture, people and events to personal memories of training for the Bar and of living and working in the peaceful courts. The illustrations illuminate the splendour of the place as it is now, whilst also recalling past glories. Above all, this is a book about a community, past and present.

Many members have already subscribed to the book ahead of publication, securing a substantial discount against the recommended retail price and entitling them to have their names inscribed in it as a lasting record of their support. Due to continuing popular demand, the publishers have agreed to extend the deadline for prior subscription until 15 June 2007.

To subscribe to the book at the special discount price of £37.50 (incl. UK p&p), RRP £45, visit www.tmiltd.com (see Forthcoming Titles), call the publisher Third Millennium on 020 7336 0144 or email innertemple@tmiltd.com.

In February, the Education and Training Department held its annual weekend for BVC students at Highgate House in Northamptonshire. The topic of the weekend was “Expert Witness” and we were privileged to have talks from Professor Martin Conway (a memory expert from the Institute of Psychological Science in Leeds), Dr William Lawler (a consultant pathologist) and Richard Neave (an expert on facial mapping from the University of Manchester). Our thanks go to all the members of the Inn who gave up their weekend to help us, particularly Master Shorrock, who organised the weekend.

A good time was had by all, be it students participating in Master Birkett’s Pop Idol, members of the Education and Training Department winning Trivial Pursuit or Master Treasurer and Master Birkett singing karaoke (pictured). The general feedback from the students was excellent and as one put it, “Highgate House was fantastic fun, as well as being of great educational value. Quality food and drink, great entertainment and excellent company. It was one of the best weekends I’ve had for a long time.”

On Friday 9 March, 48 BVC students and 30 Benchers, barristers and assorted guests made their way to Cumberland Lodge for a weekend of Sports Law. We were privileged to hear from Michael Beloff QC on the Friday evening and Master Popplewell, Matthew Johnson (Head of Regulatory Legal Advice at the FA) and Jamie Singer (Solicitor and founding Partner at Onside Law LLP) shared their views with us on the Saturday morning panel, ably chaired by Cornelius Lysaght, the BBC racing correspondent and Times columnist.

Alongside the nitty gritty of Sports Law, we also learnt that there is no reason for England to be so rubbish at football and that lots of sports stars are paid more for looking pretty than actually playing their sport! Those who went to church on the Sunday morning were fortunate enough to meet the Queen, who chatted to the students “mainly about the weather”.

Overall it was a very successful and well received weekend. The Education and Training Department would like to thank all those who gave up their weekend to help, especially Iain Christie and Master Charlton, who organised the weekend.
The Inner Temple held its first Practice Management course for its current pupils on 25 February. This replaced the former “Advice to Counsel” course run by the Bar Council which is now the responsibility of the Inns and Circuits.

The Practice Management course is designed to familiarise entrants to the profession with the Bar as a business and with the obligations and practical skills required for a well-organised practice. The course includes a strong element of ethics, advice on keeping of accounts and talks relating to conduct and organisation.

During the course of the day the pupils heard from members of the Bar, judges and an accountant, and participated in smaller groups in ethics exercises where solicitors joined them. The pupils were supplied with materials and a CD Rom to help access materials relating to the course.

I had the unenviable job of talking about Setting up in Business and all the things we wish we had been told about when we started out. Dull but important.

Mason Bloom, accountant with Silver Levene, covered the tax and VAT obligations of pupils and tenants as well as good practice in the keeping of accounts.

Judge Mervyn Roberts addressed the civil pupils and Master Arbuthnot the criminal pupils on First Days In Court.

Colin Cook and Amanda Boylen spoke on You and Your Clerk and, during the very helpful advice they were able to give as clerks, the pupils were introduced to the conventions of endorsing briefs.

Master Ross told them How to Stay Out of Trouble and Master Carr explained the regulatory and representative functions of the Bar Standards Board and Bar Council.

The ethics exercises were designed to provoke the pupils to address issues they were likely to encounter when they start out. It was important to get the pupils to identify issues of principle, acquaint them with the relevant provisions of the Code of Conduct and get them thinking along the right lines, always remembering that the real situations they will face will have much less of a black and white feel to them.

We are very grateful, as always, to the Education and Training Department - especially Beth Phillips - the volunteer members of the Inn, solicitors and accountant for their help.
DEBATING SOCIETY SUCCESS

Shannon Eastwood, Chairman of the Debating Society (pictured) won the individual speaker prize at the Manchester University Inter-Varsity Debate held in early March. His prize was some books and a gavel which had been signed by the Lord Mayor of Manchester, which Shannon is donating to the Inn’s Debating Society. Shannon also won the overall competition when he and a Middle Templar, Alex Wright, debated as the ‘Inns of Court’ team on whether ‘English proficiency should be a requirement for permanent residency in the UK’.

NP ADVOCACY & ETHICS WEEKENDS

20 - 22 APRIL 2007
15 - 17 JUNE 2007

The April NP Weekend is now full but places are still available on the June Weekend on a first-come, first-served basis. To book, please call Emma Walker on 020 7797 8213 or email ewalker@innertemple.org.uk for a booking form. The weekend is accredited for 17 CPD hours including your 9 hours advocacy and 3 hours ethics requirements. It will take place from the Friday evening to the Sunday lunchtime at Latimer House in Buckinghamshire, and costs £225 including accommodation, meals, course materials and a place on the coach to and from the hotel. You will have the opportunity to cross-examine real expert witnesses and to discuss ethical problems in a mock conference setting with solicitors. Places are limited so book now!

PUPIL SUPERVISOR BRIEFING SESSION
MONDAY 14 MAY

The next Pupil Supervisor Briefing Session will be held on the evening of Monday 14 May at Inner Temple. Should you wish to attend, then please contact Faye Appleton on 0207 797 8207 or email fappleton@innertemple.org.uk
Once the course director, Master Korner, had mastered the difficulty of getting past computer firewalls of the various speakers invited to take part in the Inner Temple and Criminal Bar Association seminar by not sending them e-mails headed “Serious Sex Weekend – Help Needed”, the Inn was able to host a very successful and well attended course – the event sold out and had a lengthy waiting list.

The day started with Claire Ward, one of the CPS rape coordinators for London, outlining the way that the Crown Prosecution Service wished to see these offences prosecuted and the strategy for dealing with these crimes including the expanding programme of dedicated HCAs being employed to prosecute serious sexual offences. HHJ Zoe Smith gave robust practical advice to advocates having difficulties with both inadequately recorded ABE interviews with vulnerable witnesses and Courts where the facilities are less than perfect. HHJ Peter Rook was able to bring delegates up to date with the Serious Sexual Offences Act 2003 with an expert overview of its impact over the last three years. Patricia Lynch QC examined an actress playing a rape complainant in a demonstration of witness handling, and then, to the immense gratitude of the organisers, stepped into the breach left by the sudden illness of one of the other speakers to demonstrate the proper way of contesting a difficult Section 41 application against Sally O’Neill QC. Dr. Fiona Mason gave a fascinating and informative talk on the psychological effects of rape upon victims, prompting lively discussion about the current proposals to admit such evidence to explain apparently inconsistent behaviour by rape victims. The consensus was that the best way forward would be by the giving of a direction similar to a Lucas direction by the trial judge rather than the calling of expert evidence in each and every case. Superintendent Simon Deacy of the “No Witness, No Justice” scheme compared the way witnesses, and in particular vulnerable witnesses, were treated now as against the early eighties.

Extracts of the jury deliberations in the recent Channel 4 television programme “Consent” were shown which sparked off lively debate in the final session of the day, a discussion with a panel of many of the day’s speakers.

Sunday morning saw a good number of delegates returning to the Inn for advanced advocacy training exercises, both in the making and resisting of Section 41 applications and then in the core skill of witness handling, both in chief and in cross-examination in particularly difficult circumstances as the witnesses were played by very experienced and convincing actresses displaying a high degree of emotion. There then followed a session with the actresses who were able to give well-informed and occasionally surprising feedback to the participants.

The Inn is grateful to all involved for their very hard work in organising a hugely successful event, the first of its kind in the Inn, but we hope by no means the last.
In January, the Inns’ Heads of Education & Training were invited to make a presentation to the BSB lay representatives on the educational activities of the Inns. The presentation covered careers’ advice, student activities, Qualifying Sessions, pupils’ advocacy and CPD. Inner Temple’s Head of Education & Training, Fiona Fulton, spoke about CPD and extracts of her presentation follow:

“I think we would all agree that if barristers are to maintain the quality of the legal services that they offer, they need to refresh their knowledge and skills on a regular basis. The Inns play a vital role in this.

The Inns and Circuits are the accredited providers of advocacy and ethics courses for new practitioners and offer courses which develop and advance skills appropriate to demands made on practitioners in the early years of practice. Often, the Inns will recruit outside assistance, for example, doctors and accountants to give young practitioners the opportunity to examine or cross-examine a real expert witness, an opportunity they find extremely valuable. One element of the courses which participants sometimes find excruciatingly embarrassing at first, yet ultimately very helpful, is video-review sessions where they are filmed and given a review of their taped performance.

These weekends also continue the collegiate tradition which members of the Inns value so highly. Tenants of two or three years are able to sit down and discuss their career aspirations or a particular point of law with a top silk or a Lord Justice of Appeal. At the other end of the spectrum, they find that talking to someone only a few years senior to them about their early experiences at the Bar is both beneficial and inspirational.

The CPD programme for established practitioners requires barristers to complete 12 CPD hours per year for as long as they are practising. Whilst advocacy training is not currently a compulsory element of this programme, Inner Temple offers six evening Master Classes covering various forms of advocacy and using expert witnesses, for example, forensic scientists. The Inns also take a prime role in identifying and responding to the need for further training within the profession, liaising with Specialist Bar Associations for this purpose. Inner Temple has responded to concern from various quarters about the quality of advocacy in serious sexual offences cases by organising a Serious Sexual Offences seminar and specialised advocacy training in March.

I mentioned earlier the high standard of teaching provided by the Inns’ advocacy trainers. This isn’t just down to using highly-skilled advocates. The Inns recognise that just because someone is a fantastic advocate, they aren’t necessarily a fantastic advocacy trainer. Conversely, those who are not considered great court advocates may well be great trainers. Potential trainers are put through their paces in an intense training course and only allowed to teach if they meet the minimum standard as required by the Advocacy Training Council.

We have described to you this afternoon the numerous educational activities offered by the Inns. When I first joined Inner Temple, I have to admit that I was somewhat baffled as to why barristers and judges with time-consuming and stressful careers would give up what spare time they had, for free, to help the Inn with its educational commitments. Any cynics out there might say it’s something to do with CPD points but as a good number of volunteers tend to contribute far more than 12 CPD hours a year, or help in ways that do not earn them CPD points, I don’t think we can put it all down to that.

So I decided to ask the volunteers themselves. Some responded that they had benefited from an Inn Scholarship and wanted “to give something back”; others felt it was an opportunity to refresh their own skills; others gained satisfaction in seeing, for example, a pupil improving over the course of a training weekend.

However, there were two reasons offered by almost everyone which I think sum up why we are able to provide such a wide range of educational activities to such a high standard. Firstly, members have signed up to the professional ethos of the Bar which means that, as members of a profession, they feel it is part of their duty to maintain and improve the standards of the profession by sharing their experiences with one another. Secondly, they, themselves have been given the opportunity to join and practise in a rewarding, independent profession which has provided a varied and stimulating career. As a result, they feel a loyalty and a moral obligation to support their Inn in its endeavours to maintain, in the eyes of the public and the government, the standards and traditions of an independent referral Bar.”

SCHOLARSHIPS FOR CHORISTERS

DOES YOUR SON ENJOY SINGING?

Choristers at the beautiful Temple Church receive a scholarship to the value of two-thirds of the fees of the City of London School for Boys. Although most boys attend CLS, the scholarship can in fact be used at any school, subject to selection by the chosen school.

A chorister's life at Temple is busy but fulfilling and very rewarding. The benefits include:

- a cathedral-style education whilst living at home
- a musical training second to none
- the development of life skills such as time management, teamwork and responsibility
- striving for musical excellence alongside some of the finest adult musicians in London
- making many friends

The Director of Music, James Vivian, is always pleased to meet prospective choristers and their parents at any time during the year. The audition process for a chorister is informal; please remember that we are looking for potential, and not the finished article.

For more information please contact:

EASTER IN THE INNER TEMPLE GARDEN...
This year’s Inner Temple Yearbook has a completely new editorial team and will have a fresh new look. Publishers Friary Press have taken over from Lexis-Nexis and are giving us the opportunity to work directly with the designers and desk editors. We hope to expand our coverage of social events at the Inn and welcome any photographs that members might like to loan. The Treasury Office does not always manage to keep track of members’ outside activities, and if you know of an event or achievement of interest, the editor, Andrew Goodman, would like to hear from you. In particular, are there any budding cartoonists who would like the chance to display their talents? We are also conscious that sadly, not every obituary of members of Hall is notified to us, and members are asked to contact the editor of these also, to run an in memoriam page. Contributions and suggestions for the Yearbook should be sent to agoodman@1chancerylane.com.
